Since I was a boy, I have been fascinated with the strong connections between the music I grew up with in Ireland the music I fell in love with from America, Brittany, Galicia and other wonderful places around the world. In my years playing music and working in the music world I have been lucky to work with many of the great artists I consider to be gems in these music genres.

So when an opportunity came along to do a show on ICRFM, I jumped at the chance to highlight music that has inspired me from all over the world, but especially from my own Island and the mountains of Appalachia that are close to my heart.

So please sit back and enjoy the music that makes me who I am today.
